The longer portion that finishes Aaron's Rod was written by Lawrence in 1921. The biblical title refers to the rod of Aaron in the Old Testament, Moses' brother who built the Golden Calf in the desert for the worship of the Israelites. The rod, his divine symbol of authority and independence, finds its echo in the flute of Aaron Sisson.

DH Lawrence's Aaron's Rod is a novel about a coal miner's union official who leaves his empty marriage to travel to Italy and pursue his dream of professional musicianship. His instrument of choice is the flute - the symbolic rod of the title, which echoes the themes of power and freedom found in the Old Testament story of Aaron's staff.

The rod, his symbol of authority and independence, finds its echo in Aaron's flute, which is broken later in the novel during an anarchist riot. There is a price to pay, Lawrence seems to imply, for daring to oppose orthodoxy and to try to create a new life for oneself. Unlike Lawrence's more famous works, such as "Lady Chatterly's Lover" and "Women in Love", which are both admirable for their ...
