Part of your job as a staff associate in an auditing firm is to document your findings in working papers (also known as workpapers) and schedules. Workpapers summarize your audit actions, such as planning the audit. Schedules show what steps you take to reach a conclusion. For example, to support your conclusion that cash is correctly stated on the balance sheet, you may prepare a schedule showing all bank reconciliations affirming that they reconcile without discrepancy to the balance sheet.

Good documentation also improves efficiency in subsequent-year audits. By documenting appropriately, the auditor is providing next year's audit team with a record of matters of continuing significance, helping them avoid duplication of effort, and giving them a solid foundation on which to build. They can walk in with a better understanding of what's ahead and the information that is needed, and they don't have to start from
